

The 27th North American Conference on Chinese Linguistics (NACCL-27)

CALL FOR PAPERS

The 27th North American Conference on Chinese Linguistics (NACCL-27) will be held at the University of California, Los Angeles, April 3-5, 2015.

The theme of the conference will be Integrating Chinese Linguistic Research with Language Teaching. While papers addressing issues in all aspects of Chinese linguistics are welcome, the conference organizers give priority to two types of papers for presentation at NACCL-27:

- 1) Linguistic research cast with pedagogical implications;
- 2) Teaching and learning studies raising important issues for linguistic research.

<<<A pre-conference workshop for language teachers is being planned. Stay tuned as more information becomes available.>>>

Abstract submission

- Abstracts are invited for 30 minute presentations (including questions);
- Abstracts no longer than a single page should be submitted to the conference email address: naccl27.ucla@gmail.com (i.e. NACCL27.UCLA@GMAIL.COM). Only electronic submissions are accepted;
- The abstract should be in either plain text format or in MS Word format;
- In the abstract, please give 2-3 keywords to identify some general research areas, e.g. phonetics/phonology, grammar, lexicon, semantics, discourse, pragmatics, corpus linguistics, historical linguistics, sociolinguistics, technology, character learning, teaching models, assessment, teaching materials, heritage language, teacher-student interaction, and so forth;
- The abstract should have a cover page with the title of the paper, 2-3 keywords (see above), author's name, affiliation, contact information (including email). The abstract page should be anonymous without any identifiable author information.
